Salt's network ranked first in Switzerland in June 2019

In June 2019, Salt's mobile network was ranked for the first time number one among its two national competitors and 6th out of 318 tested operators on a global scale with a total of 29 218 points by 4GMark, a renowned international mobile performance test platform.

Average download speed measured was of 44.2MB/s and average upload speed of 16.9MB/s. These levels allow customers to benefit from an excellent download experience and to stream high definition television anywhere, at any time on their mobile device.

This achievement is the result of the continuous investments into the infrastructure made by Salt over the past years with its European network partner Nokia. Over the last three years, the operator invested several hundred million Swiss francs into the network, which enabled the company to significantly improve its coverage throughout Switzerland.

Pascal Grieder, CEO at Salt, commented: "We are very proud of the world-class network we are delivering to our customers today. While we are convinced that we are delivering best value for money already today, we will continue to invest into our infrastructure to further improve the quality of service for our customers."
