Salt Relocates Headquarters to Prilly's Central Malley District

Salt is relocating its headquarters from Renens to a modern, sustainable building in Central Malley, Prilly. This up-and-coming district offers state-of-the-art facilities, excellent public transport connections, and enhanced infrastructure for its employees. The relocation reflects Salt's continued efforts to be an employer of choice while advancing its environmental and social responsibility goals.

After more than 16 years in Renens, Salt is relocating its headquarters to the up-and-coming Central Malley district in Prilly – a carefully considered move that reflects both Salt's long-term stability and its commitment to sustainability. The move to Avenue de Malley 2 in 1008 Prilly marks a strategic step for Salt as it adapts to the evolving demands of modern work environments, with its new location situated directly next to the Prilly-Malley railway station and just minutes from Lausanne city centre.

It meets particularly high energy efficiency standards and supports Salt's goal of reducing its environmental footprint, by featuring:

- Minergie-P-ECO certification
- Situated in Malley Central, Western Switzerland's first certified "2000-watt site"
- Geothermal probes and heat pumps, allowing the capture of underground heat to supply the building with energy
- Photovoltaic panels on the roof, generating solar energy consumed directly on-site
- Highly advanced insulation
- Sustainable materials

"The new location is a big step-up for our employees, centrally located, easily accessible and part of a dynamic new district. We are thrilled to enter our new eco-oriented premises, offering an even more stimulating and collaborative work environment, than we have experienced so far." says Max Nunziata, CEO of Salt.

The new workspace, spanning over 2.000 square meters, offers shorter commutes, state-of-the-art office facilities, and a dynamic environment surrounded by restaurants, leisure venues, and essential services. The relocation reflects Salt's continued efforts to be an employer of choice while advancing its environmental and social responsibility goals.
